

A continuous, non-differentiable function

(EXTREMELY HARD) Does there exist a function  $f : \mathbb{R} \rightarrow \mathbb{R}$  (i.e., the domain is the real numbers and every value is a real number) such that  $f(x)$  is continuous everywhere and differentiable nowhere?